The Agile Master for Public Services is an immersive training programme for those who want to deepen their knowledge of Agile, and apply Agile in their work.

Do you recognise yourself, or your team members, in two or more of these points?

- You are aware of Agile but not really using it in your work at the moment
- You need to find a way for large groups to collaborate on complex change projects and programmes
- You are struggling to adopt Agile methods
- You are finding that your projects are getting bogged down and need a way to deliver change at pace
- You need to get some help on how to 'sell' Agile to leadership or your team

If yes, then our Agile Master for Public Services will give you the understanding, core knowledge and confidence to apply Agile to your complex change programmes. You can be the Agile instigator in your organisation.

We help Public Services tackle messy problems, co-delivering effective change.

What the Agile Master will give you in practice:

- You'll learn by doing, as the training is run as a simulated Agile project
- You'll gain thorough working knowledge of the approach, quickly, through solving real challenges and applying learning in a safe environment
- You'll get accredited. The programme is the only Agile training programme designed with and for the public and social sector, and is accredited by the Public Service Transformation Academy.

You can use this session to develop awareness amongst your teams and build confidence to adopt agile. Be able to show leaders the benefits of agile, rather than just tell them.

It's important that the training mirrors a real life project. All our trainers have experience of using agile in public sector organisations, so the training is far from 'talk-over slides'.

The programme blends theory and practical exercises to develop a thorough working knowledge of Agile and how it can be used to deliver complex change projects.

Agile is an iterative approach to project management

Especially in a constantly changing world

Delivering and managing change in social impact services is difficult.

Social impact services provide support to some of the most vulnerable people in society, there is a lot of complexity in doing this.

Planning change projects in a linear way using traditional project management approaches often holds organisations back from learning and refining their changes over time.

Project managers overseeing traditional change projects may find themselves sticking to legacy project plans that need constant maintenance to 'look' as though they are on track.

This can slow progress and limit impact.

So, how can those providing public services deliver change in an environment that is constantly evolving?

Agile is an iterative approach to project management that values human communication and feedback, adapting to change, and producing working results. It serves as the foundation to our approach to implementing change and improving services.

Who is this training for?

You might be:

- You are a project manager looking to adapt your approach to your and your team's work
- You are working in the public service and facing complex problems change projects and programmes
- You want to empower your team to adopt an agile approach to work

We are proud of what we do

The skills you need to turn messy problems into meaningful opportunities.

Basis Training was established to meet our clients needs for high-quality, impactful public sector training at an affordable price point.

In 2010, driven by acute austerity, our clients told us, “we need to diversify our staff’s skills to save money.” We realised we could fill that knowledge gap – and fill it well – so we started developing our first courses to rave reviews.

Since then, we’ve made it our mission to build more and more courses in response to our clients’ most pressing problems. We take those problems and turn them into meaningful opportunities by equipping delegates with a powerful mix of theory and frontline experience.

We provide training for:

and many more!
